Noiseless Motors and Ability to Re main Absolutely Stationary

an entirely new type of Zeppelins. The first one of them has just made its trial flight over Lake Constance and was watched by large crowds from the Swiss shore.

The new air cruisers are of gigantic size and differ in their shape from the older types. Their form is more slender, with sharp pointed ends, and instead of three separate gondolas they have only one large one, which is almost as long as the body of the balloon. On a platform on top of the balloon two quickfiring guns and four machine guns are mounted.

The most important features of the new airships are almost noiseless motors and the ability to remain perfectly stationary over a certain point.

While manoeuvring over the lake the new Zeppelin repeatedly emitted large clouds of black smoke, which rapidly assumed enormous proportions and hid the airship completely 9:00 pm from view. Standing still in the air the giant dropped many bombs on targets anchored in the lake, scoring a number of hits.

The manoeuvres lasted six hours and seemed to be completely successful. In the evening the Zeppelin returned to Friedrichshaf. Three other airships of the same type are said to 'e nearly completed and will undeabtedly be used for new raids on London.
